Stef and/or Bob, do you have an ETA on posting the required reporting elements for test reports? Test methods require conditioning at the medium burn rate. The required reporting elements in the test method are not sufficient to determine if they meet that requirement. Are manufacturers required to submit: (1) data sufficient to determine compliance with the medium burn rate requirement, or (2) are they only required to report the reporting elements listed in the method? If you choose option 2, how does EPA assess if the testing followed test method requirements for conditioning related to the medium burn rate requirement?

Thanks!
Lisa
